Terrorists Worldwide Pulling Together To Create “A Horrible Synergy”

By TOM BROWN

Rumors now appear to be correct that dozens, perhaps hundreds, of known terrorists are wending their way to a secret South American enclave where they will “elect” one of them to lead all terrorists worldwide.

If true, this would mark a dramatic turn of events in the history of worldwide terrorism. Or, as one terrorism expert phrased it, “This is going to be a horrible synergy!”

Another expert expanded on that thought. “If what we hear is true, this would far surpass the poisoned water supplies in 2039 and the 100 jets simultaneously held hostage in 2071,” said a reliable but anonymous source at the U.S. Central Intelligence Command. “If all these loose bands of terrorists do pull together — and actually begin to work in some sort of unison — this would be a syndicate to rival any band of criminals, ever!”

According to reports from government crime centers in nine different countries, the whereabouts of known terrorists suddenly “fell off the radar screen” last weekend. A senior government official in Moscow reportedly sent an urgent plea via INTERCONNECT, the private tie-line used by major police bureaus, to ask for an “immediate inventory” of all terrorists in all countries. One source at the Central Intelligence Command, in Washington, D.C., confirmed that up to fifty or more known terrorists were not able to be located in places where they are usually subject to routine surveillance.

“There’s absolutely no question that something is going on,” the Central Intelligence Command source said. “We now believe that terrorists are joining together for purposes we can’t even begin to predict.

“But it would appear that whatever we thought was terrorism in the past is about to escalate to a whole new level of meaning!” |<
